The origin of the name
The Arco Room takes its name from the Arch of Augustus, erected in 27 B.C as the entrance to the city, marking the end of the Via Flaminia. The ancient road joining Rome to Ariminum was renovated when Octavius Augustus was declared Emperor: the wide opening, impossible to close with wooden doors, is a symbol of the period of peace established by Augustus. Although the statue of the Emperor which once crowned the arch is no longer there, the beautiful faces of the divinities lining the columns are still visible: Jupiter and Apollo facing Rome, Neptune and the Goddess Rome facing the city. The Arch is a distinctive symbol of Rimini and has been on the city's emblem since Medieval times, bearing witness to the majesty and beauty of Roman architecture.
